O'REILLY®

The technical knowledge layer for AI-era engineering teams

Vetted, expert-authored answers and skills your senior technical teams can apply today.

Your engineers already use general AI. The problem isn't speed — it's trust. Up to 51% of general-AI citations carry no verifiable date, and over half have no named author. O'Reilly's answers are cited to a named author,every time — so the speed you gain from AI turns into business value, not technical debt.

> We call exactly two things unique: the owned corpus behind every Answer, and the live practitioner programme. Everything else is included where others charge, or deeper where others are broad.

What changes for your team

Productivity comes back

Answers live inside Slack and Teams, cited to a named author. The 20–30% of time your team spends verifying general AI output goes back into the work.

Depth, in whatever form your team learns in

Books, live courses with the practitioners who wrote them, hands-on labs, and verifiable skill plans — people learn differently, and the platform meets each of them.

One subscription, every location

Bengaluru, Pune, Frankfurt — the same access, at the published, volume-discounted schedule. Live events replace one-off bespoke sessions; the recording stays.

Where O'Reilly fits

We're not asking you to replace what's already working.

General AI tools (ChatGPT, Copilot, Cursor)

— we complete them.

India's engineers are among the most AI-trusting in the world and already run Copilot at scale — a sourced, cited layer alongside it is a governance decision, not a replacement

Broad platforms (Udemy, Coursera)

— we replace them for technical teams.

India's engineers are among the most AI-trusting in the world and already run Copilot at scale — a sourced, cited layer alongside it is a governance decision, not a replacement.

LinkedIn Learning

— complement or replace.

Keep it for business skills if your Microsoft agreement makes it cheap. Your technology groups still need depth it doesn't have.

.Simplilearn Learning Hub+, upGrad Enterprise

— differentiate on who teaches.

Simplilearn alone runs 700 live classes a month in Indian time — live delivery isn't unique; the author at the front of the room is.
